

«Women as objects, European women make the right impression»

March 2014/ Rennes-France

Between tradition and modern history, how is the European woman depicted in figurines and statuettes in our everyday life ?

Christine Barbedet is an artist (visual arts) who lives and works in Rennes, Brittany (France).

As part of the International Women's Day (8th March 2013), she would like members of the European countries to help her collect small figurines symbolizing the woman's image (mermaids, witches, dancers etc...), her aim being to create a work of art.

Christine Barbedet,

Rennes, 30th of october 2013

She is looking for your support in this project by sending her :

The figurine of a woman which symbolises something that is collective or intimate, from traditional or modern history.

Please send the small figurine (of no financial value) by standard post (nonrefundable), preferably before the 15th February 2014 to :

Christine Barbedet
Résidence La Paillette
53, rue Baudri-de-Bourgueil
35200 Rennes
FRANCE

christine.barbedet@gmail.com

A photo of yourself with the object (face, and and object fully visible).

If possible, please send a numerical version of the photo by email (jpeg/300 dpis/large format). (It will appear in a colletive work; on a poster of a collection of portraits; via Internet).

A short text presenting the object and its' history (this will also be published).

Please include your first and last names (not mandatory), city, country & email address. Texts can be sent by email and standard post, along with the figurine. And, if it's possible, please send the text in French !

In exchange, Christine Barbedet will send you a virtual catalogue, before the summer, of this vast collection published on internet.

A huge thanks to everyone for your European support !
